Helix Terra

Ceramic is a material that has existed for millennia, only now are we able to utilise its unique abundance of properties in a kitchen environment. Firm, resonant, with exceptional resistance to chemical, scratch and thermal shock. Also chromatically resistant and impervious to UV rays, so the finish cannot fade.

This stunning contemporary kitchen incorporates the simplicity of the ceramic materials and avant-garde design. Here you can see the island doors and worktop featuring the Iron Grey finish. The left hand housing units, floating wall units and tiling all utilise the Ash finish. The wall units and island plinth are shown in the Basalt Grey finish.

The ceramic material allows for highly versatile design, whilst not losing its inherent simplicity. Our island and base unit fascias use an incorporated handle. The wall units feature the slab design to enhance the visual effect. End panels use plant on ends to create a minimal, cube like styling.

Helix Vetro

There is something visceral and unspoken about the attraction of glass. A material for those who are not willing to compromise, who seek perfection in everything they do. Hard but tactile, utilitarian but beautiful, a product full of paradoxes but ultimately stunning and desirable.

Helix Vetro transforms the contemporary kitchen into a room where natural and minimalist elegance align. Available in a selection of both gloss Lucido finishes, or matt Opaco finishes. If you can't find your desired finish utilise our bespoke colour matching service in both Lucido and Opaco options.

This set features the beautifully clean Lucido white finish on the main island units. Incorporating the aluminium handle profile, and also utilising cloaking end panels to create the substantial boxed aesthetic.

The floating wall units underneath the window use the ultra modern Opaco Black finish to create a stunning satin effect. The far wall units are shown in Opaco Charcoal and also in slab format to create a very clean uncluttered visual centre piece.

BURLINGTON

Classic smooth painted finishing, but with a twist. The Burlington marries enduring and perceptive styling with a delicate overflow detailing. The result is emphatically sophisticated, communicative and compelling. The island and dresser unit are finished in the strong Overcoat Blue, the mantle and glazed wall units in Snow, and the base units and tall housings in Taupe Grey.

This kitchen utilises an array of unique accessories to stunning visual effect.

The open island end unit is not only aesthetically attractive but functional too. The right hand end of the island unit is softened using curved fascias, and the Acanthus corbels are another point of noteworthy craftsmanship.

Two curved dresser doors are used to create a mirrored shelving area and a genuine talking point that will be the envy of family and friends.

If sophistication and luxury are what you are looking for, look no further than the Burlington.

BURLINGTON

WALLACE

The archetypal Traditional In-frame kitchen – quintessentially British. Crafted from solid Oak, and shown with fine beading detailing and satin chrome butt hinges. Oak is an enduring timber - warm, natural and tactile, yet dependable and fit for all seasons.

In this kitchen environment the Wallace door retains its robust yet subtle proportions, but the addition of painted doors mixed with the natural oak finish of the main island units adds that little extra something. Here we've used the Fern finish on the peninsula unit and seating area, whilst the base and wall units are finished in Travertine.

Cleverly designed accessories bring this set to life and create points of interest. The peninsula unit forms a unique focal point, and the 1/3 glazed wall doors add a little extra luxury. The plate rack to the left of the cooker offers useful and functional storage space.

There is no mistaking this is an exemplary timber kitchen.

WALLACE

HAYWARD

For those contemplating a more classic look the Hayward offers the same proportions as the Wallace range but with a luxurious smooth hand painted finish. Simple but captivating – the Hayward is fast becoming a signature design classic.

Finished in the bold Redsetter paint option, along with the more classic Soft Sand on the island units and the curved dresser and utility units in subtle Alabaster.

Notice the framed end panels which offer differentiation from plain or T&G panelling options. Also the concave dresser unit which is truly sumptuous. All finished off with highly polished chrome knobs, and profiled plinth – the overall effect is truly inspirational.

HAYWARD

JERWOOD

A kitchen for the contemporary purist. Based on traditional foundations, but with sleek and minimal styling, forged for the modern home of today. Smooth painted finishes are durable and hardy to absorb the realities of daily family life.

For those who are a little more daring this is the perfect range to use a stronger, bolder painted finish to create an unparalleled statement. The Jerwood still offers all the customisation of sizing and finishing though, so a harmonious and individual environment is still easily within reach.

Shown here in the contemporary stone grey finish for the island and wall base units, and then mixed with classic snow. Open frame systems are used to create easily accessible storage space, and break the run of enclosed units.

Subtle curves soften the edges, and a splash back and polished chrome handles help add the finishing touches to what is a truly classic contemporary space.
